If you think of the jobs robots could never do, you would probably put doctors and teachers at the top of the list. It's easy to imagine robot cleaners and factory wokers, but some jobs need human connection and creativity. But are we underestimating what robotss can do ? In some cases, they already perform better than doctors at diagnosing illnessed. Also, some patients might feeel more comfortale sharing personal information with a machine than a person. Could there be a place for robots in education after all?

British education expert Anthony Seldon thinks so. And he even has a date for the robot takeover of the classsroom: 2027. He predicts robots will do the main job of transferring information and teachers uill be like assistants. Intelligent robots will read student's faces, movements and maybe even brain signals. Then they will adapt the information to each student. It's not a popular opinion and it's unlikely that robots will ever heve empathly and the ability to reallly connect with humans like another human can.

One thing iss certain, though. A robot teacher is better than no teacher at alll. In some parts of the world, there aren't enough teacher and 9-16 percent of children under the age of 14 don't go to school. That problem can be partly solved by robots because they can teach anywhere and won't get stressed, or tired, or move somewhere for an easier, higher-paid job.

Question 41. Which of the following can be the best title for the passage?
 A.Human teachers never get tired.
 B. Robots are better than human teacher completely.
 C.Robots will play a role in education.
 D. Robots are better than human teachers.
